- Plains, deserts, coastal regions, and mountains. These are different types of land found in different parts of our country.
- Punjab is called the land of agriculture because it has flat plains with rich and fertile soil. This makes it perfect for growing crops like wheat, maize, and mustard. The farmers there use both traditional and modern methods to grow food for the country.
- People in coastal areas face strong winds and heavy rains during cyclones, which can damage homes, crops, and roads. Cyclones can also harm animals and trees. That is why early warnings and safe shelters are very important.
- Mountains are high landforms with steep slopes, often covered in snow in colder regions. Sikkim is a state in the Himalayan mountains, known for its snowy peaks, cold climate, and beautiful valleys. It is home to unique plants, animals, and cultures.

F. long question answer.

- Life in the plains of Amritsar is simple and peaceful. The soil is rich and fertile, so many people are engaged in farming. They grow crops in large fields. The people enjoy traditional food like makki di roti, sarson da saag, and lassi. Farming is the main occupation, and life is closely connected to agriculture.
- The Golden Temple, also known as Sri Harmandir Sahib, is a very important Gurudwara of the Sikhs. It is gold-plated and surrounded by a beautiful sarovar (water tank). It is famous for its langar sewa, where free meals are served to everyone without any discrimination. People volunteer to cook, serve, and clean, showing the spirit of service and equality.
- Life in the desert is very hot and dry. People and animals have adapted to survive with little water. Plants like cactus store water. Animals like camels help people travel and carry loads. People wear colourful clothes and live in mud houses with tankas to store water. They also eat special foods like dal-bati-churma.

4. Jaisalmer Fort is a famous desert fort located in Rajasthan. It is built using golden coloured sandstone, which gives it a golden appearance. It has tall and thick walls for protection. The fort is special because people still live inside it, making it an inhabited fort. It is also a famous tourist place.
5. Life in coastal areas like Puri is closely connected to the sea. People depend on fishing for their livelihood. Beaches are beautiful and are used for making sand art. Many types of sea shells are found there, including shankh used in temples. People enjoy traditional foods like dalma, pakhalā, chhena poda, and rasagola. The city is also famous for the Jagannath Temple and Rath Yatra festival.
6. Life in the mountains is different and beautiful. The weather is cold and many places are covered with snow. People live in valleys and on slopes. They grow crops suited to cold weather. They wear warm clothes and live in wooden or stone houses. They also celebrate festivals like Loosong and Namsoong with dances, food, and joy.
